

Torben Albertsen is currently Postdoc at Universidad Técnica Federico Santa María in Chile, but in general working on intercultural philosophy in-between the relations of Mapuche rakizuum (philosophy), latin American philosophy and European Philosophy.

Heather Hurst is an associate professor of education and doctoral program director at Frostburg State University. Her teaching focuses on qualitative research methods and social justice across educational contexts and in educational leadership. Her current research explores teacher education for social justice in rural contexts and classroom discourse for democratic purposes.

Cheu-jei Lee is a Professor in the School of Education at Purdue University Fort Wayne. He is also the Site Director of the Appleseed Writing Project, an affiliation of the National Writing Project. He received his Ph.D. degree in Language Education from Indiana University-Bloomington. His research focuses on literacy education, critical literacy, and sociolinguistically-based writing.

Declan Mc Kenna PhD. is a Community Education Facilitator with Louth Meath Education and Training Board and a PhD graduate at the School of Education, University of Limerick. Declan's areas of interest include social justice, youth and diversity in education and programmes aimed at alleviating disadvantage in society.

Geraldine Mooney Simmie PhD is Professor of STEM Education and Director of EPI•STEM National Centre for STEM Education at the School of Education, University of Limerick, Ireland. Geraldine's research interest is in emancipatory teaching and teachers' professional learning and the connectivity between STEAM literacies, care, justice and democracy. Geraldine's methodology specialism is in philosophical criticism and in critical and feminist policy analysis.

Marla Morris is a Professor of Curriculum, Foundations & Reading, in the College of Education, Statesboro Campus, Georgia Southern University, GA, USA. She studied philosophy at Tulane University, religious studies at Loyola University, New Orleans and Education at Louisiana State University. Her main interests are postmodern philosophy, psychoanalysis, curriculum studies and systematic theology. She has published papers on Martin Heidegger, Jacques Derrida, Michel Serres, Simone de Beauvoir, drawing extensively on the work of Gaston Bachelard and Donna Haraway. Marla has also worked in Holocaust studies, trauma studies, medical humanities and chaplaincy. Morris is currently working toward a PhD in philosophy at the European Graduate School.